Original drawing made by Keady Thomson for American Radiator Company

This heat closed the lease

Said the bride: "When I saw AMERICAN Radiators I knew everything was all right, and that our first little home would start out in comfort. Other things do not matter, but so much depends on the heat, and the janitor says they have an IDEAL Boiler, so we will be warm and comfortable anyway."

AMERICAN & IDEAL High winds cannot arrest nor chilling cold offset their ample flow of warmth

In apartments, residences, cottages, schools, offices, churches, clubs, hotels—in every building where men and women live or work, IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators have proved their great superiority for economical and dependable heating.

The large, generous firepots and scientifically placed heat-transmitting surfaces and sections of IDEAL Boilers with smooth and large water ways give the utmost heat producing power, and forbid fuel and heat wastes. The successful history of this Company is written in the millions of homes and other buildings where heating economy has become the watchword.

Best value in a building—IDEAL-AMERICAN heating

AMERICAN Radiators in any building immediately place it in the modern class where up-to-date service and conveniences are to be found. When looking for an apartment you will have greater confidence in your landlord and greater satisfaction from your abode, if you choose the one with an IDEAL-AMERICAN outfit.

If you intend to build or remodel this Spring, do not neglect to read our book "Ideal Heating." A copy will be sent free on request. It contains most valuable information for owner or tenant about this heat that costs the least—no obligation to purchase.

This permanent Vacuum Cleaner is best to buy

COMMERCIAL CLUB HELPS FAIR BOARD

Endorse Campaign to Secure Advertising and Contest Premiums—Machine Firm Not to Move at Once.

As an evidence of the co-operation which the Commercial club desires to exert with the directors of the Janesville Fair board, a letter endorsing the board's solicitation of advertising and contest premiums for the 1917 fair was ordered sent to that board by the Commercial club. Dr. Wayne Munn, president of the fair board, attended the weekly meeting of the Commercial club today and spoke of some of the hopes the board has regarding the 1917 fair. "It is our desire," he said, "to make the fair more of a county proposition this year than it has ever been before. I feel that this is but a branch of the activity which the Commercial club carries on in its community work. It is an attempt to bring the city and the county closer together, and to establish a more perfect community spirit."

Dr. Munn spoke of the proposed plan to have a night fair, stating that provided the expense of lighting was not excessive, he believed such a course would be taken. The matter of township displays, arrangements for which are being made by County Secretary L. A. Markham, was receiving much attention, and would probably be a far more successful feature of the next fair than it has been in the past.

I. B. Wortendyke, who has recently been appointed financial secretary of the fund raised by the fair, in a floating indebtedness, spoke to the directors on the outcome of that campaign, attributing the success to the generosity of the people and the thoroughness of the necessity of the venture by those who worked for it. "The men were determined to win out, and so they did," said Mr. Wortendyke, in summing up the campaign.

The question of bringing to this city a man to deliver an illustrated lecture on the scenic wonders of the northwest was brought up, and the committee for further arrangements. It is expected that the club will secure a hall and the lecture will be given for a purely nominal sum.

M. C. Mound, chairman of the industrial committee, reported that the manufacturing concern which had contemplated the construction of machinery, had decided to remain in their present location until the present rush of business is over. They are desirous of making a move when the time is propitious, and will consider Janesville most seriously. Investigation of the company will continue, with a view to securing the firm's decision for a Janesville plant.

HALF DRESSED MAN TAKEN IN CUSTODY

Sheriff Whipple Takes Charge of Wanderer, Who Claims His Home is at Minneapolis.

The sheriff's office today was endeavoring to locate a half-dressed man who was taken into custody Sunday night in Johnston, and whose identity is obscure, although he says his name is Olaf Gertsen and that he is a native of Minneapolis. Where he has a wife and children. Gertsen was found in a most pitiable condition. Half clothed, dirty and suffering from exposure, he was apprehended by Sheriff Whipple. Johnston farmers notified Sheriff Whipple of the man's presence in the community, and when the officers arrived they had the wanderer locked in a barn. The man is about thirty-five years of age and has a pronounced Norwegian accent. He claims that his father lives at Mauston, Minn., and that he got into communication with relatives.

Patrick Stein Who Wrote Almost Perfect Service Papers Selected to Fill Vacancy.

Patrick Stein, who wrote what is perhaps the best examination paper in any civil service test ever given to applicants for positions with the Janesville police department, is the man who will fill the vacancy.

He was selected by Chief P. D. Champion and Mayor Fathers to fill the vacancy left through the resignation of Harry J. Smith.

Chief P. D. Champion is a man who has a reputation better than ninety-nine per cent perfect.

Stein will patrol the west end of the business district and the depot, and he will be in charge of the night men, has been put on duty, and this morning was stationed at the Main and Milwaukee street corner.

That it is necessary to have two men handle the east side of the river during the day time is the belief of Chief Champion, and it is expected that he will shortly be promoted to the position of chief.

The long hours of the vigil is another reason why the chief is advocating another man to aid in this district.

INAUGURAL SPEECH CITES NEED OF UNITY

There were many demonstrations for the president on the main back of the White House. At some of the reviewing stands everybody rose and cheered like fans rooting at a baseball game.

The president acknowledged all cheers and applause by raising his hat and sometimes waving it at the crowd.

At 1:15 the president took his place in the stand to review the procession, and the line resumed its march.

Extraordinary Guard.
The guard of honor was extraordinary. On the tops of buildings along the line and scattered through the crowd were large numbers of secret police without incident. President Wilson went to his room to await the hour of noon for the ceremony in the senate chamber.

The ceremony in the senate chamber was a grand affair. The hall was filled with distinguished guests. The diplomatic committee took their places on the floor, the supreme court following the diplomats.

The retiring members of the house of representatives, and representatives-elect of the sixty-fifth congress, marched into the chamber to seats reserved for them on the west side.

Just before noon, President Wilson, accompanied by senators-elect took seats on the east. A chair was placed on the rostrum for Speaker Clark beside that of Senator Saulsbury, practical completion of the assembly, and everything was ready for the senate of the sixty-fifth congress to convene at once.

Single Flag in Chamber.
Before the vice-president's rostrum the cabinet officers were seated. A large silken flag hung directly over the vice president's stand, the only one in the chamber. It was the first time at an inauguration that even this patriotic decoration had been employed.

Headwork Lightens Housework

MAKE HOUSEWORK EASY.

By PROF. P. G. HOLDEN.

Is it not surprising to find that a saving housewife is often wasteful and extravagant? If we were to say: "The average housewife throws away $500 a year," or if we said: "She wastes a pound of sugar a week," we should begin at once to search for the reason and the remedy for the waste. Yet the waste of vital energy is much more extravagant and the consequences much more serious.

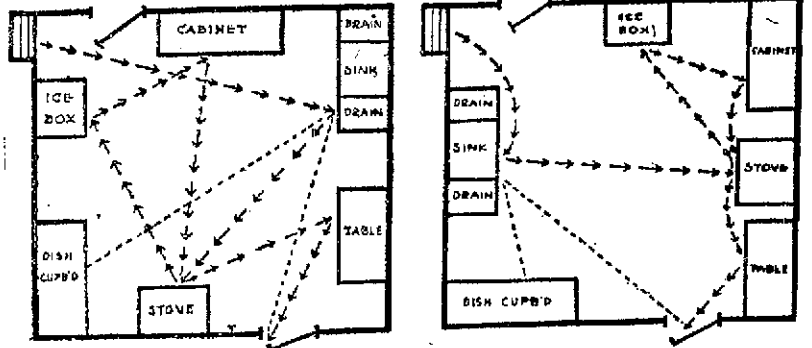

The average woman wastes a vast amount of energy in useless walking. Her kitchen furnishings are arranged around the wall in such a way that she crosses and recrosses the central floor space from one place to another. Don't cross your tracks.

In planning the kitchen we find there are just two main processes in all kitchen work. One process is to prepare the meal; the other to clear it away. Disorganization in the kitchen means wasted energy.

Standardize the Kitchen.

Standardize the arrangement of your kitchen by placing the equipment, stove, sink, icebox or cupboard, table, etc., in right relation to each other. Material and furniture for clearing away should be arranged with the same object in view.

We have taken for example a kitchen measuring 15 feet by 15 feet in size. We measure the distance traveled in preparing one vegetable, from cellar to sink for the washing, to stove for cooking, to icebox or cooler and cabinet for butter or cream and seasoning, back to stove, to table for dishing up, to dining room. The distance traveled was 75 1/2 feet.

Wrong Way.

In clearing away this one dish the distance traveled was 3 1/2 feet. In the second diagram we have shown the same kitchen with furnishings rearranged with a view to placing the equipment used for preparing the meal and that for clearing away in the right relation to each other. The distance traveled in preparing one vegetable with this arrangement was only 52 1/2 feet, and in clearing away only 20 feet.

Figuring on this basis that we should prepare on an average five dishes for each meal and three meals a day for one month we should save more than 15,000 feet of walking by having the equipment arranged as in the second diagram. In one year the distance saved in steps would amount to more than 35 miles.

Have Right Equipment.

When the furniture has been arranged so that the work may be done with the fewest steps, then study each task and have the right equipment and tools for each.

Is the dishpan below or within reach of the sink or is it in a cupboard across the room? Is there a little shelf over the sink on which can be kept soap, etc., and a narrow strip of hooks above the sink for such things as soap, dishes, dish mops, dippers, etc.?

Has the work table shallow drawers which hold carving knives, fork spoons, knives, forks, etc., and a deeper drawer for extra towels, holders, etc.?

Are the skillets, saucepans, kettles, long spoons, etc., on shelves or hook strips near the stove? Have you really furnished the kitchen with all the convenient work tools we can afford? If not, why not?

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Should you happen to see "The Honor System" you would probably applaud the thrilling feats of the inventor who establishes wireless communication between the United States and Japan, imagining you are looking at an example of the playwright's art. But the film is truth rather than fiction, for the actor of this part, Milton Sills, not only won his spurs as a wireless inventor years ago, but he participated in the linking up of the Pacific coast and the Orient.

Mr. Sills is a pupil of Nikola Tesla. He was destined by his parents for an electrical engineering career. After receiving his professional degree he perfected one of the first apparatuses used in this country for amateur wireless. Luck rather than choice made him an actor.

Good looking, graceful, clear voiced, the young engineer was asked to fill a gap that the departure of the leading man had made in a western stock company. Continuing in the new calling, he achieved a success. After playing many prominent roles on the New York stage he was finally won over to "silent drama."

Sills was delighted on finding that he had been selected out of many actors under consideration as typical for the part of "The Honor System," hero of "The Honor System." It was just like going back to his old profession, particularly since the play was to be filmed in California, where the big trans-Pacific project of linking up the east and the west was actually in progress.

FIRE AND BRIMSTONE.

A glimpse into Hades—the fire and brimstone hereafter of orthodox acceptance, adorned with regulation red devils, with horns and tridents, blue flames and lost souls—will be afforded those who see the production of "Orpheus," the screen version of Samuel Hopkins Adams' story "Orpheus," of which Wilfred Lucas is the star. This spectacle, which is said to contain some startling scenic effects, was conceived by Director Tod Browning and will be used to establish the connection between the Orpheus of mythology and the character about whom the modern romance centers. The incident depicted is the descent of Orpheus into Hades to rescue Eurydice.

FROGS FOR STARS.

One company has established a dressmaking shop at the studios. It is found cheaper to make the dresses than to buy and alter them to fit.

Accurate models of all of the women in the company have been made. The dressmakers fit the fashions on these inanimate models, which saves the players from all but the final fitting.

All this was an idea of the scientific management experts who have been attached to nearly all the large studios to eliminate waste.

Ethel Barrymore is starred in a movie version of Edward Sheld's play, "Egypt." On the stage it starred Margaret Anglin. In the movies it is named "The Call of Her People." The pictures were made in Florida.

Green Turtles.

The green turtle finds its home in the coral reefs lying to the north of Jamaica, though it is found in other parts of the West Indies. The creature is caught by the employment of extremely strong nets, which are interlaced between the rocks. Once caught the turtle is taken to Kingston, where it is kept in special sea water pens on the seashore. When in the pens the turtle is provided with a peculiar kind of sea grass, which it likes very much. Curiously enough, when it is taken away from the West Indies it refuses to eat this grass. Indeed, it will die of starvation sooner than touch the grass, however carefully preserved.

What is Fun?

"I don't see what fun it can be for you to go on these fishing trips with your husband," said her best friend. "That's because you don't know anything about fishing," she replied.

"Do you?" "Indeed I do. I can sit in the stern of the boat and give advice to the best of them. And when a big fish gets away nobody can beat me telling how it ought to have been or might have been landed."

"I shouldn't think that would be much fun for you."

"Shouldn't you? Well, that's because you don't know how mad it makes my husband. You don't know what fun it is."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

YOUNG BEAUTY ADDS TO FAME OF NOTED FAMILY; EXPERTS SEE BRILLIANT CAREER

Miss Meggie Albanesi.

A brilliant career on the stage is predicted by London critics for Miss Meggie Albanesi, just seventeen, who is a member of a family noted throughout Europe. Her mother is a popular novelist. Her father is a pianist and composer of note and for many years has been a leader in music in England. A sister of nineteen is winning fame as a painter, and a portrait by her of her sister, Miss Meggie, was hung this year at one of London's greatest exhibitions.

RAISES MONEY AS AMATEUR ACTRESS

The Hon. Violet Baring.

One of the most popular ways of raising money for the British war funds is by means of amateur theatricals, and one of the most sought after society girls as a participant in such is the Hon. Violet Baring. She is the youngest daughter of Lord Ashburton, whose first wife, and the mother of his four girls, was a child of the fourth Viscount Hood.

"Yes, we quarreled because she wanted a twenty-five dollar hat." "But you seem to have made up with her." "Yes, I bought her a fifty dollar dress."—Houston Post.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Can you tell me what is good to reduce about the heart and lungs without any injuries to the system?

What can I do to stop my heart from being so oily? I wash my hair one day and the next day it is oily again.

(2) When a young man is "crazy" about a girl and the girl doesn't care about him except to go to a show, what should he do?

ANXIOUS FATTY.

(3) All foods containing fats should be given up. This means that only the lean parts of meat are to be eaten, and that pork, bacon, etc., must be avoided. Eggs and fish (except mackerel and others containing oils) are excellent. Skimmed milk is also good without being flesh making.

(4) A girl is fatening and a person who is sincere in wishing to lose flesh will eat none of them. Tea and coffee without cream or sugar must be given up. Fruits, except bananas, are permissible, but no sugar should be taken with them. Apples and prunes are desirable.

(5) Bread, as well as cake, is not to be eaten, unless made of flour from which the starch has been extracted. Water should not be drunk after a meal or an hour before or after.

(6) Atomic for oily hair is made of the grain of tincture of alcohol, camphor, one-half dram of tincture of capsicum, two grains of nuxvomica, one-quarter of an ounce of cod liver oil and two and one-half ounces of alcohol. Shake before using and massage into the scalp with the finger tips.

(7) A rank for oily hair is made of cod liver oil and cod liver oil.

WHAT A MAN NEEDS AND WHAT HE WANTS

Civilization has produced a serious incompatibility in the species Homo sapiens. It has given him a hired man, appetite and a man's metabolism. That is to say, many of us have more than we burn.

The hog is a species of mammal perfectly fitted for his fine metabolism. He contributes enormous quantities of protein and other digestive agents to his mammal lighter up. Yet the mammal, when he makes a sorry showing in competition with the hog when he metaphorically bites off more than he can chew. The hog, it seems, is fitted with an alimentary canal well adapted to the quantity of his ration, whereas in man the food tube seems perfectly attuned to the infinite capacity of his appetite.

It is hard to counteract the popular notion that health is determined by a good appetite—a notion featured in every history a doctor hears.

Best Preparation to Clean the Teeth

Can you inform me as to the best preparation for cleansing the teeth? I have heard of many different ones, but I am not sure which is the best. I have heard of tooth powder, tooth paste, and tooth brush. I have heard of tooth powder, tooth paste, and tooth brush. I have heard of tooth powder, tooth paste, and tooth brush.

More Peroxide Pharmacology

Why you kindly inform me whether hydrogen dioxide or peroxide is deemed a good agent for the first aid treatment of such wounds? Does it destroy all germ life instantly? (D. J. H.)

Answer:—It is not advisable for first aid dressings, because the explosive force of the burning or foaming which occurs when the stuff comes in contact with blood or serum may drive infection deeper. Tincture of iodine is the better first aid application. Peroxide in the wound, is not a strong germicide.

"SAVE THE BABIES."

These are authentic quotations from the pamphlet on babies by Dr. L. Emmett Holt of Columbia and Dr. Henry L. K. Shaw of Union University.

At 15 months the baby may have at first one teaspoonful and later a tablespoonful of rare scraped beef, mutton or chicken. When 18 months old he should have one-half of a meaty baked potato daily. When two years old he may have most of the fresh green vegetables, which are thoroughly cooked and finely mashed. More on diet will be told tomorrow.

PLAN OPEN AIR SCHOOL FOR ANTIGO TUBERCULERS.

Antigo, March 5.—The Community Welfare association is planning to establish an open air school for tuberculosis sufferers here at Antigo. A fund has been started with part of the money from the sale of Red Cross seals last Christmas. Forty pupils in Antigo public schools should be in open air schools now to prevent their consumptive tendency from developing according to Miss Cornish, the public health nurse here.

THE HIGHFLIERS

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

It is Hard for Clyde to Believe That Anyone Could Fail to Love Mollie.

"I wonder what is the matter with Mother?" Clyde was stretched on the sofa with Mollie sitting beside him. "Have you any notion why she acts so queerly?"

Mollie ran her fingers through his hair and smiled into his face, but did not reply at once. "Finally she said: 'I think I told you what I thought was the matter, but you pool-pooled at me. I still think I was right.'"

"What did you remember?" Clyde caught the little, caressing hand and kissed it.

"You should pay more attention when I speak," he said. "I was in her husband's ears. He so seldom heart it."

"What I love to look at you so much that I forget to listen to what you say."

"That is no compliment to my conversational powers," Mr. Clyde said. She looked at him with her head on one side like a timid bird.

"They can not equal your beauty, though they are very pleasant to the eye," she said. "I will pin my attention not to your lips but to your words this time," he pleaded.

"My opinion is that she is—that she feels hurt that someone else has come between her and her boy. You are too attentive before her. It is now, now, who ever heard of a wife complaining because her husband was too attentive?" laughed Clyde.

"I was not complaining, my dear, you know—"

"She stopped and hid her face on his shoulder. Clyde lifted it and taking it between his hands as if it were a rare bit of fragile pottery, kissed the troubled eyes and lips.

"You dear, timid little mouse, you mean she is jealous of you? How could anyone do anything but love you?"

"Some women hate mice," she faltered.

New York, March 5.—The National Tuberculosis association announced today that the holiday sale of Red Cross Christmas seals had raised $1,000,000 for the tuberculosis campaign.

"With the co-operation of the newspapers these tremendous results from the Red Cross seal sale would have been impossible," said Dr. Charles J. Hatfield.

The association is proud of the fact that the slogan of the campaign, "one seal for every inhabitant of the United States," has been realized. The sale last fall amounted to a voluntary tax of one cent for each man, woman and child in the country, except the insular possessions.

Seals were sold in every state and territory of the United States except

Household Hints

USE OF CORNMEAL.

Cornmeal and corn breakfast foods are excellent for breakfast because of their value averages 1,750 calories per pound. Compared with eggs, fruits and meats, often served for breakfast, cornmeal is a fairly high protein content and a large amount of starch. This means you should eat more butter relatively and less bread when eating cornmeal.

Cornmeal, compared with meat and potatoes, is inexpensive. If you have ever been in the south you know how many simple and inexpensive dishes can be made with cornmeal. The southern cook makes hock and corn, or ash cake, cooking a dough of cornmeal and water on a board before an open fire or baking it in a shallow earthen New England style. The ash cake and kept down his household expenses by cultivating a liking for "hasty pudding," made of cornmeal.

Cornmeal may be combined with a small amount of fish or meat, and it is good tasting and economical. It was the custom of the American Indians in early times to combine cornmeal with the fish and meat which they brought back from the chase.

In making cornmeal mush or hasty pudding with water, allow three and one-half times as much liquid as meal; if milk is used, allow four times as much as meal.

LEFTOVER MEATS.

Ham Pudding.—Two cups ground ham, two cups cooked spaghetti, two cups strained tomatoes, one green pepper ground, one dash paprika, salt to taste. Put all together in baking dish and bake about forty minutes in moderate oven.

Cottage Pie.—To every cup of cold chopped meat add three-fourths cup gravy or stock. Season, put into baking dish, cover with mashed potatoes, bake until brown.

Individuals.—Grind leftover meats of any kind. Season and moisten with milk or gravy. Make biscuit dough, roll one-fourth inch thick, cut into rounds. Between two biscuits place some of the meat. Bake. Serve with gravy or brown sauce.

Bread and Butter.—To each cup chopped meat add one cup bread crumbs, one egg beaten, two tablespoons cream (or milk and butter). Season. Butter individual cups, fill two-thirds full of mixture, set in pan of hot water and bake thirty minutes. Turn out on platter. Serve with tomato sauce or gravy.

Left-Overs With Eggs.—Chop meat fine; season. Beat well as many eggs as needed. Have plenty of meat in spider, pour in one-half of eggs, spread well over pan, add remainder of egg. Cook slowly fifteen minutes. Cut in squares. Serve hot.

THE ENDLESS CIRCLE.

"Live a life, do not only get a living." On the quotation calendar for 1917 which a kind letter friend has sent me, that is the second quotation.

It hangs over my desk and more than that it is written in my heart. I don't believe there is any reminder that is more generally needed, especially in this twentieth century of ours.

Of course it's very important to get a living. A living is such an important and compelling business. It fills your life up with business; it keeps your ambitions occupied, it gives you a sense of accomplishment from day to day; it seems to supply a reason for living.

It is only now and then that one gets a glimpse of the fact that to devote all your energies to getting the paraphernalia of living, so that you can keep on living and keep on devoting your energies to getting that paraphernalia, comes pretty close to being an endless circle.

But such a life leaves you "Empty and Craving."

"Life leaves you empty and craving, leaves you nothing to do but little immediate things that turn to dust as you do them," says a character in one of Mr. Wells' books, who has reached his goal of material success and discovered suddenly that he has failed to "live a life instead of only getting a living."

"What do I mean by 'Live a life'?"

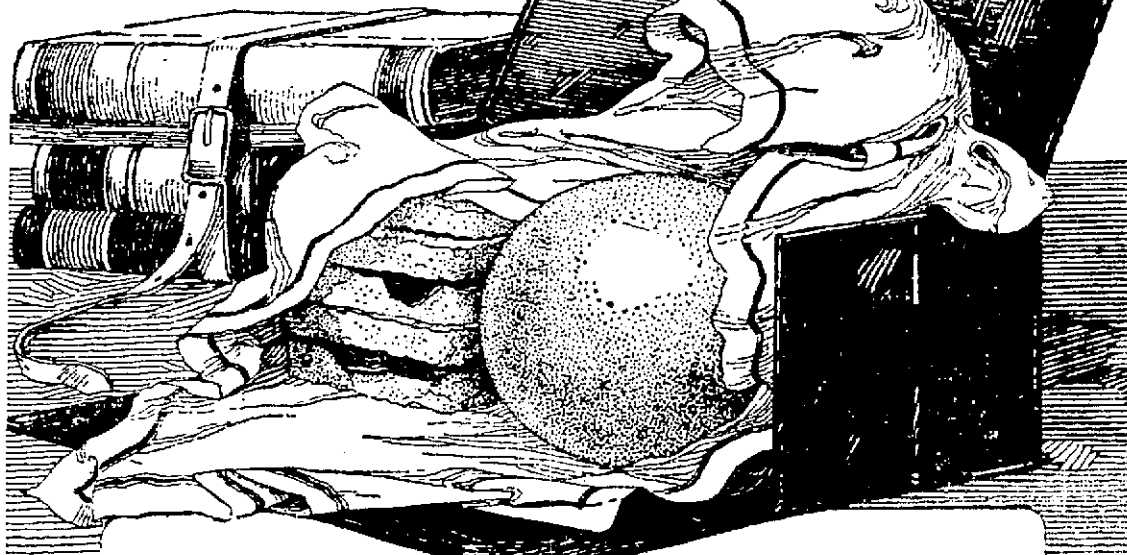

There you have me. I don't wholly know. To find that out you have to open your soul to life and let it come in and teach you. I think it means living day by day towards a greater appreciation of beauty, a better understanding of truth, cultivating worthwhile friendships, instead of just neighborhood or society acquaintances, trying as definitely to build up your character as your bank account, thinking more instead of just dreaming, broadening and deepening your sympathies, trying to do your bit for human betterment not in any patronizing goodly way, but as a natural right thing to do, finding out what really gives you happiness and not constantly chasing that will-o'-the-wisp, pleasure.

Thus some of what it means to me; to you it may mean something entirely different.

As I said, you can only open your soul and make up your mind to let life come in and teach you.

But know this one thing surely,—it means more than only getting a living.

WILSON TAKES OATH IN CEREMONY MARKED BY SIMPLE DIGNITY

Officially reserved for the diplomatic corps was given over to members of their families as the diplomats themselves were assigned to places on the floor. Guests of senators were assigned to the northeast gallery and guests of representatives had seats in the party in the galleries was little less distinguished than the party on the floor. It was composed of American women scarcely less known than their husbands. In the party below, men and other women in the forefront of the social life of the nation.

SOMETHING REGARDING MEN WHO HAVE BEEN PRESIDENT OF U. S. A.

Woodrow Wilson is the 28th president of the United States, reckoning Cleveland's two terms as separate ones because he was the only president serving twice who was not re-elected. Wilson leads in the nativity of presidents. Eight of her sons—Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, William Henry Harrison, Jackson, Tyler and Polk—have held the highest office in the gift of the nation. Ohio has given six native sons to the presidency. They were James Harrison, Benjamin Harrison, McKimley and Taft.

Of all the vocations in life the law has furnished most presidents. Five of the presidents were lawyers at the time they were elected. Three are classed as statesmen; two as soldiers; two as farmers; one as a public official.

Seventeen presidents have been college men; one was graduated from West Point, nine had no collegiate education.

English paternal ancestry has predominated among all the presidents. Fifteen were of Scotch-Irish extraction. Six were Scotch-Irish, three were Scotch, two were Dutch, one was Welsh. The youngest president at the time of his inauguration was Roosevelt, who was 46. The oldest was William Henry Harrison, who was 68.

Of all the presidents John Adams lived to the oldest age. He was 90 when he died.

of the nation, families of foreign diplomats, who with memories of the resplendent ceremonies of the coronations of monarchs on other continents were about to see the comparatively simple inaugural of an American president.

Solemn and Dignified. A flood of light, softened by the tinted glasses in the lofty ceiling was diffused throughout the beautiful auditorium, which has few rivals among the assembly chambers of the world's parliaments, and illuminated the dignified, impressive even dramatic, and yet simple ceremony about to be enacted on the floor.

While the senate was assembling for its special session, the first of the Sixty-Fifth Congress, the diplomatic corps was arriving and assembling in the marble room to be escorted into the chamber. Gorgeous in the colors and gold of their court uniforms, the corps entered headed by its dean, the Ambassador of France, Jules Cambon. One figure which had been familiar at other inaugural ceremonies was missing. It was that of the German Ambassador Count Johann H. Von Bernstorff, who severed diplomatic relations with the United States entered by procedure in order of the time they have been admitted to this country, the ambassadors coming first and the presidents last. They were shown to seats reserved for them near the center aisle and immediately behind the space reserved for the president's cabinet.

Then came the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in the sombre black silk gowns of office, moving in a body with slow dignity to the places of honor in the large chairs placed in the row facing the vice-president and at his right.

Congress Enters. Immediately afterward, the retiring members of the House of Representatives and the members elect were announced. They had been forming meanwhile in two lines down the long corridor reaching toward the House wing of the Capitol. The House, unlike the senate, was not in session. Some retiring members had departed for their homes without waiting for the ceremonies. A smaller attendance of representatives than the usual number made for the comfort of those in the small senate chamber.

A seat had been placed on the rostrum for Speaker Clark at the left of Senator Saulsbury, president pro tempore of the senate. The representatives and former representatives filed through the chamber to places reserved for them on the west side of the chamber while the members of the senate and a few other were seated on the east. A few other high officers of the army and navy and persons who by name have received the thanks of congress, as much of the party assembled for the ceremony, the inauguration of the vice-president.

Wilson is Seated. President Wilson, escorted by the marshals on armchairs, entered the senate chamber at the main door and was escorted to a seat on the floor, on the right hand side of the center aisle and facing the rostrum. Vice-President Marshall was escorted to a seat on the rostrum.

From that stage the ceremonies moved along rapidly. The senate chaplain, the Rev. J. Porter Prentiss, offered prayer and the senate of the Sixty-Fifth Congress was called to order by the president pro tempore, Senator Saulsbury.

As silence settled over the chamber, Vice-President Marshall stood beside Senator Saulsbury. Both men raised their right hands; the president pro tempore slowly spoke the vice-president's oath; the vice president repeated the oath. Brief and simple, the ceremony quickly was over and the thirty-two new senators were sworn into office.

Thousands are Present. As the inaugural party passed out from the great dome and into the open air to the spot where practically all presidents since Monroe have been inaugurated, it was as if the curtain had been raised for the climax of a drama.

Before a great sea of humanity, official, invited and uninvited, President Wilson took his place at the left of the chief justice and at the right of the arrangements committee. Places for the presidents and vice-presidents, associate justices of the Supreme Court, the vice-president, secretary of the senate, senators and former senators were ranged along on the right. Retiring members of the house and members elect were next to and behind the senate.

To the right of the president were seated the members of the diplomatic corps, governors of states and territories, members of the cabinet, army and navy officials were at the left.

Bands—War Thought. While the party was assembling the units of the inaugural procession were forming on all sides of the capitol, and the music of marching bands as the organizations took places waiting to swing into time behind the president when he started back to the White House, gave the only appearance of a military air in the whole proceeding.

The assembling of the presidential party, its departure and the demonstrations of the crowd were the only spectacular features of the outdoor ceremony. The actual ceremony itself was simplicity and solemnity.

Arriving on the presidential stand the president, flanked by the justices of the Supreme Court, governors of states, senators and representatives, ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary of foreign governments, ranking officers of the land and naval forces of the United States and members of his cabinet, received the oath from Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court.

From the president's appearance until the assembled company was seated and the chief justice rose to administer the final ceremony, continuous applause swept around the stand. Hundreds of thousands of people massed the great plaza, overflowing into the capitol grounds in a great surging sea of humanity.

As the president, however, facing the chief justice repeated the words permitted only to the nation's highest, the applause seemed to die away, and as the first citizen raised his hand in solemn assent, there was silence among the thousands.

Soon, however, the crowd burst the leashes of reserve and as the president stepped forward to deliver his inaugural address—his address—was forced to pause to acknowledge the tribute.

President Lunches. Following his address, the president, Mrs. Wilson, and the vice-president and Mrs. Marshall returned up Pennsylvania avenue at a brisk gallop to the White House, where they were refreshed by a light luncheon before entering the residence. At the president's departure from the capitol, the great procession started to form and move slowly westward toward the Executive Mansion.

Plant A Garden.

By J. G. Moore, Horticulturist, University of Wisconsin.

Vegetables may be secured early by either of two methods, the use of perennial vegetables or encouraging vegetables to develop in advance of their normal season by special practices. The perennial vegetables are ordinarily the earliest vegetables for the home. Of these, asparagus, rhubarb and onions are of most importance and none of them are particularly difficult to grow. To get the best results, however, certain cultural practices must be given close attention.

Asparagus Needs Rich Soil. In the culture of most crops the soil is of paramount importance, and this is especially true of crops of long duration like asparagus and rhubarb. These crops will do well on a wide range of soils if they are properly handled, but only mediocre results will be secured on the most favorable soils unless care is taken to keep the soil in a condition favorable to the growth of the plant. For asparagus we desire a deep, rich, well-drained loamy soil, preferably of the heavy, sandy loam or lighter clay types. The asparagus soil should be retentive of moisture, and in order that it may possess this characteristic and at the same time furnish the plants the greatest amount of available plant food, it must contain a large amount of vegetable matter. This is best secured by working a liberal supply of manure, preferably well rotted, into the soil at the time of preparing the bed. Work the soil deeply and have it as finely divided as practical.

As to Plants and Planting. The plants should be one or two years old at time of planting. To some time is an important factor and two year plants are more desirable. They may be secured from seed firms. Plants may be grown from seed, but this method is not advised for the home gardener. The number of plants will vary considerably with the available space and the popularity of asparagus with the family. Fifteen to twenty-five plants will ordinarily be sufficient for a family. They should be set as early in the spring as possible, either in holes or trenches at least eight or ten inches deep. The plants should be set with the crowns at least five to six inches below the surface, as the crowns come slightly nearer the surface each year. Cover the plants about two inches, taking special care to have the roots in intimate contact with the soil by using fine soil and packing it firmly about the roots. The holes or trench may be gradually filled in as the plants develop. Two feet between plants will be found a satisfactory distance for planting in the home garden.

Bed Established in Three Years. The cultural practices for the first three years, the development period of the bed, may be summed up as follows: For the first season: Cultivate frequently and deep, keeping the soil fine and loose and the weeds down. After growth is finished and before the berries ripen, about September 15, cut off the stems even with the surface of the soil. Apply a two-inch dressing of manure, preferably well rotted. If manure is not available, lawn clippings and later on pulverized leaves to which have been added some commercial fertilizers may be substituted.

Second season: Early in the season work in the manure and re-establish the bed. Till fairly deep. Break off stems of old plants as soon as they appear. Cultivate between rows. Continue cultural practices as for first year. Do not harvest any of the crop.

The cultural practices of the third year are identical with those of the second season. The crop may be harvested, but cropping should be continued to a period of about three weeks. After the plantation has had three full seasons' growth, it is considered as established and may be cropped for six or seven weeks. Four details of culture should not be neglected. If culture is to be had: (1) Keep the soil fertile; (2) keep the soil well tilled; (3) remove the tops so that seed production will not use the food which should go to the spring crop; (4) do not crop so long during any season as to exhaust the plants. In harvesting the time of cutting will depend upon the kind of asparagus you prefer (green grass, half-blanching, or blanching). I prefer the half-blanching, which means that I want my asparagus cut below the surface when the top is an inch or two above the surface.

To Have Rhubarb Pies. The essentials of rhubarb culture do not differ greatly from asparagus. The soil should be prepared in exactly the same manner. The plants may be secured by dividing old rhubarb plants, exercising care to take at least one strong bud or eye for each new plant. Or they may be purchased from the seedsmen or grown from seed secured from the same source. There to five plants properly handled will be sufficient unless you desire to have winter rhubarb by forcing it. Then at least twelve plants should be set and every two years planting of at least twelve plants should be made.

Set the plants in the spring, with the crowns just below the surface. Till the same as for asparagus. Apply the manure as soon as the snow is off, working it into the soil in the spring. Remove all flower stalks as soon as they appear. Do not harvest heavily until the third year. Care should be exercised not to pull so much at any time as to exhaust the plants. The crop may be hastened by setting a box with unequal sides over the plants, as soon as the snow is off, with the lower side toward the south. Cover the box with glass and bank fresh horse manure around the box.

Have Perennial Onions. Early onions may be had from perennial onions or from onion sets. The Egyptian tree or perennial onion gives the earliest crop. Secure your plants from the seedsmen early in the fall. Plant in rich, loose loam if possible, and mulch lightly with manure as winter approaches. Set the plants twelve to fifteen inches apart. Twelve to fifteen plants should be enough for the ordinary family. Cultivate well in spring. Keep the soil fertile and free from weeds. Do not harvest two heavily the first year and at all times leave enough plants to provide for next season's crop. Properly handled, the bed will last for several years.

Protect "Greek Onion" Season. Plant as early in spring as the garden soil can be worked. The larger sets give quickest returns. Therefore select your sets in planting. A good method is to have the large and small sets alternate. Planted one and a half to two inches apart, a row so planted will provide green onions for quite a long period. Plant in succession so as to prolong the "green onion" season.

Another article by Mr. Moore will appear next week.

Light.

Light is a priceless illumination on the world twelve hours a day. But He might have known we couldn't be satisfied with it. Judging by the actions of birds and chickens and other close nature animals, we have always thought that dusk was a suggestion and darkness a broad hint to folks that it was time to go to bed. Not on your incandescent bulb! We turn Mr. Edison's juice loose and let the meter races with our pocketbooks while he sits around till midnight and wreck our disposition for the next day. And if we go out on the street at night, we run chances of being winked at by a car sign or a movie ad.

If you want to dispose of property in the early spring time, begin advertising it now, and by means of the little want ads.
